1814. Mining. Eastern States. Autograph. Jas. T. Ames (1810-1883) and the Ames Manufacturing Co.’s Ice Making Machine, 1867-1871 Correspondence. Jas T. Ames was an inventor and manufacturer. His brother organized the Ames Manufacturing Co in 1834 in Massachusetts. They started in cutlery and tools, but soon moved into military weapons. When JT’s brother died in 1847, he took over management of the company. The list of inventions is phenomenal, including early sewing machines, bicycles, etc. During the Civil War they had one of the largest. munitions plants. He had a fantastic mineral collection which probably went to Amherst college, where he got his Master’s in 1863 (honorary). This correspondence includes letters signed from following: 1) Wm Seymore Tyler, a professor at Amherst, 5/25/1868, regarding the ice making machine. Tyler is interested in the machine and sounds like a possible investor. 2) Letter from Geo. F. Wilson to Ames regarding the Thaddius Lowe patent of an ice making machine. He trusts the principals of the invention, but is questioning the marketability of the machine in the southern States. 3) H. K. Brown letter to Ames, May 26, 1867. Brown was a famous sculptor. Ames has again apparently shown Brown the ice making machine. – 2pp letter. 4) W. H. Howland 2 pp letter, 12/25/1869 to Ames regarding his unhappiness about his percentage for selling the ice machine. He is apparently working for Ames on commission. 2pp. 5) 11/9/1867 letter from Thaddius Lowe to Ames. He suggests market price of $2 per ton or less. On the reverse of the note, Lowe writes that there is much interest in the machine and that “plenty of capital can be raised.” Est. $400-600

1815. Mining. Eastern States. Autograph. Jas. T. Ames and the Ames Manufacturing Co., and Goodyear Rubber Co. March 29, 1859 letter from Washington to Ames from W. T. Hall regarding rubber in an invention. “I think the right to use vulcanized rubber for pumps is with one of the younger Goodyear...so far as Goodyear’s Patent is concerned.” Goodyear was not a scientist, but became a master of rubber. In 1858 he patented the vulcanizing process. This letter was written just after that, and Ames apparently had staff whom recognized the value of it for one of their products. This letter is certainly one of the earliest mentions of Goodyear. Est. $100-200
